5 Mögliche Antwort:

The author is worried about the fact that small towns are suffering from decreasing populations. Small towns struggle because young people are increasingly moving away, and the remaining population is getting older. This means that in future there will be a greater demand for health and other care services. As a consequence, the working population will decrease, and due to the changing nature of industry, there will be less job opportunities or none at all. The author does not agree with people saying that these small towns should simply be abandoned, but believes that their inhabitants deserve a proper solution for the future.
