On the other hand, the assignments given to interns may be quite complex and challenging. Given that many people with internship contracts have received an excellent education, they are usually thought to be capable of performing certain high-skill duties, provided that they do not need any extra training on them. Same as normal workers, interns should do their jobs in the best way possible and be aware of the fact that they represent the company at any time. Being aware of this fact will help in succeeding during your internship.

B	The new-found importance of internships
C	Laws for internships
D	Risks of entering such types of employment
E	Common similarities between internships
F	Possible consequences of internships
G	Expectations of interns
H	Agreements between interns and companies

Curriculum Vitae

You plan on applying for an internship in another EU country for the summer holidays. The company or organisation only accepts CVs in Europass format. Therefore you go online and download the CV template in English (<https://www.europass.at/en/what-is-europass/cv/how-to-use-europass-cv/>).

- a First, read the instructions for creating your CV. You may want to look at some examples.
- b Then fill in the different sections providing:
 - personal information
 - description of your work experience
 - description of your education and training
 - personal skills and competences (languages, communication skills, organisational skills, job-related skills, computer skills, etc.)
- c Swap your CV with a partner and give each other feedback.
