

Tracks 35–39 – Unit 10/12

Jamie: Comfort Hostel, Barmouth

The staff was friendly and helped us find free-time activities. The rooms were very crowded. There were eight bunks per room. There was not much room for luggage. The hostel was cleaned daily, but the bathroom was sometimes a little dirty because of all the people staying there and because of all the sand from the beach. Great location, right by the beach! All in all a great stay!

Julie: Joe's Hostel, Bristol

The staff here is not very friendly and the hostel isn't very clean. The rooms are good, however. They are very spacious, only four bunks per room. The bathrooms are very, very dirty! However, the hostel has a great location. There are lots of discos and restaurants nearby. I have seen better!

Meg: Orange Hostel, Swansea

This has to be the worst hostel ever. The rooms are small and very dirty and the staff is very unfriendly. There were insects in the bathroom, which was very disgusting. There was a lot of dirt under the bed and sand from the beach. I think the area here is not very safe at night. I really would suggest that you go somewhere else! The WORST PLACE EVER!

Daniel: Thames Hostel, Birmingham

The hostel has a cool lounge area with a pool table and comfortable sofas. The place is clean and the staff is very friendly and helpful. The bathrooms are small but clean. The location is not great, but there is an underground station near the hostel so you can get around easily. The showers are very clean but small. The rooms are spacious and we felt very comfortable here. The staff was great.

Kristin: Oxford Hostel, London

This is an amazing hostel. It's located in the heart of London where many major attractions are very close and there's an underground station right in front of the hostel. There is a supermarket next door that's open 24 hours a day. The staff is great: very British – very friendly – and they give you tips about what you can see and do! The rooms are small, but they are very clean, as are the bathrooms. Feels like home! LOVE IT!
