Hi, my name's Hyeon and I work at a factory that produces paper and plywood products. I've been working here since I started my _____ . I was _____ to head the Logistics Team a few months ago, but I work with all the departments in my company to make sure that we deliver our products _____ and up to our rigorous standards. I'm _____ computers and I love the programs used in logistics and tracking. Although I've always _____ my job, it's been no walk in the park for me. For one thing, my _____ thought I packed strange lunches because I brought things like kimchee and rice balls to work. I think some of them just thought I was odd. However, after I made some traditional Korean food for our Christmas party, some of my colleagues tried it and really liked it. We had something new to talk about. That was when I really started to _____ here. I really feel that working hard and _____ is worthwhile, but it's also important to be yourself. Before I got my promotion, I was worried that my colleagues would be jealous of me and I was afraid to take the job, at first ... but my manager convinced me that my hard work should be _____ and that I would have even more fun tackling a new _____. He was right – and my colleagues actually _____ me a lot, as I got used to doing the new job. It was the right _____ ... to take a chance!
